English Aspirant for Welterweight Title Lasts but Four Rounds Before American Boxer-Lewis 43-4 Pounds Overweight.

The third round was the hottest of

It was not until the presed in boxing. Now he is working out every day with Jimmy Clabby, Cyclone Johnny Thompson, Billy Papke, Ray Bronson and the veteran Australian boxer, Snowy Baker, who are teaching him some of the rudiments of artful fisticuffs. Arnst was one time champion bicycle rider of Australasia, and when he took up rowing no one thought that he would some day become the champion of the world. Arnst stuck to rowing and finally won the title. He feels the same way about boxing, and if, after being tutored for a certain length of time by valous boxers, he will keep at it faithfully. Arnst has a typical physique for a heavyweight puglist, being over six feet in height and weighing nearly 200 pounds. His efforts in other forms of sport have given him a remarkable muscular development. That he possesses stamina and endurance was shown in his ina and endurance was shown in his remarkable race last year on the Zam-besi river in South Africa, when he de-feated Ernest Barry of England.

London, Jan. 25.—Harry Lewis, the American welterweight, who won the welterweight championship of England a year ago from Young Joseph, knocked out Johnny Summers, the English aspirant for the title, in four rounds tonight.

A blg crowd witnessed the go, filling every scat in the Olympia, It was a savage fight while it lasted, and honors were even for the first two rounds. The men insisted upon clinching at every possible chance, and the referee frequently was compelled to slep in and separate them by main strength.

I would like to hear from this Smith boy from Ballouville who thinks he is something of a boxer. I will meet him any place he sees fit for any number of rounds. Having met him on one occasion in a six round go, and if he is not satisfied and wants another beating, I am his man, I would also like to meet the winner of the Young Monty and Abe the Newsboy bout in Windham Athletic club tonight. Hopping you will oblige, and many thanks, I remain, yours respectfully.

BASEBALL FANS BET on the Diamond.

Numerous instances there have been of championship games being interrupted by some extraordinary or some unusual reason, but perhaps the oddest of them all happened in a game at Cincinnati one day 15 or 20 years ago, says Frank Bancroft.

"We were having a redhot battle with Chicage that day," says the famous business manager of the Reds, "and in the eighth inning—with the score 1 and 1—McPhee hit a ball down to short too hot for Dahen to handle cleanly.

"Well, on this day one of the men who had wandered out on the field to talk to McPhee took off his hat, and, addressing the popular second baseman of the Reds, in a tone clearly audible in the stands, said:

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Will the "Red Man" Become a "Paleface?"

Mr. Editor: There was a time when even the retail dealers put coloring into rum as the chemist does into water today. "Red rum" was made on Water street years ago, and a "paleface" could be transformed into a "red man" at short notice.

The clerk of one of the establishments there was also its "mixer" or "chemist," so to speak.

When "spirits" came into the place a part of his duty was to "rectify" any faults they might have, and give them tone and color, before they entered the bodies of the customers.

One of the best patrons was an Indian who bought no other kind of liquor than this "red rum" which the place is and tallow candle, where electric bulbs don't cut any ice, and candle wicks are figured in.

Brief State News

One of the best patrons was an Indian who bought no other kind of liquor than this "red rum" which, while it was not particularly adapted to facilitate digestion, gave him at times such a rosy view of life that he could catch a vista of the "happy hunting ground" where game was plenty and a "paleface" could not hunt without a license.

The Indian came into the store one morning in very cheerful spirits and set his jug down to get it replenished.

"The last 'red rum' I bought of you," said he to the cierk, "was the best I ever drunk. I want some more just like it—out of the same barrel."

"He eartainly get it from the same He certainly got it from the same barrel, for that was the old mixing barrel that had made so many "red men" happy. There were no "palefaces" lurking long around that establishment, for the "red rum" knew its business. And the mixer thought he knew his business to her busy autition. knew his business, too, but by putting in more than the usual amount of color, which gave a better flavor, he had pleased the Indian's palate mightily. Now nothing but the undertaker could ever rob the groggery of the In-dian's patronage. His loyalty to Water street was inflexible.

He reasoned in this way: "The Great Spirit will not hurt me, even if I do not pray to him, for he is good; but if I neglect the evil spirits, they may do me mischief."

Whether he considered water that had been "treated" was among the "evil spirits," is unknown. But if he "evil spirits," is unknown. But if he is living today it is to be hoped he will be a well-read man in chemistry or he may become a "paleface" by drinking "doctored" water in Norwich. C. H. TALCOTT.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

Genuine Merit Required to Win People's Confidence

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfil the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been cured, to those who are in need of it. In an interview on the subject a prominent local druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, New Britain.—Bishop Brewster will confirm a class at St. Mark's church Sunday evening.
